

Structural Drying

The length of time it will take to dry your structure depends upon several things:

K-tech's certified technicians adhere to the IICRC S500 industry standards for professional water damage restoration and utilize advanced moisture equipment to measure the moisture in the air, structure and its contents. These levels will then be closely monitored throughout the restoration process. Drying is complete when the moisture content of building components such as wood, drywall, plaster, etc. has returned to normal conditions.