

Should you leave your home during the restoration process?

The restoration environment may be unsafe for small children and it may be necessary that they remain out of the structure or damaged area.

Professional drying equipment stirs up dust which may be bothersome to those with respiratory problems.

To properly dry a structure several air movers and large dehumidification equipment must be used. These devices create some noise and make the property drafty for several days. Continuous operation of such equipment is critical for proper restoration.
